The National Uniform Depot

- Toured in November of 2014 while attending a NHQ-sponsored RT COTC conference at RTC Great Lakes
- News to me:
 - The NSCC does not own the uniforms – Goodwill Industries owns them
 - Goodwill sells the uniforms to sailors at a discount in weekly “Reclaim Sales” (these sales support programs which employ special needs folks on the base)
 - Sailors have first dibs – we get the scraps!

The National Uniform Depot

The National Uniform Depot

- There are genuine shortages of popular items
 - L/XL anything
 - Navy has been enforcing its BMI standards – there aren't a lot of 18-year old recruits who are Large or Extra Large, but there are a lot of L/XL sailors who are buying them in the Reclaim Sales
 - Female anything
 - There are fewer of them, and they graduate at a much higher rate than their male shipmates!
 - Dress Uniforms
 - Recruits only get one set, and they're issued about 6.5 weeks into an 8-week training; not many wash out that late into RT.

National Uniform Depot

- RECOVER YOUR UNIFORMS!!
 - Supply is so tight, NHQ and NUD will be enforcing the 110% allowance for the foreseeable future
 - Uniform Deposits
 - Repayment... (with interest, if earned!)
- If it's not in stock this week, try to order it again next week, and the week after, and the week after...
- Changes coming soon: online ordering and payment...

Shot across the bow...

“We are not a franchise operation. You cannot sign up for the program, get use of the NSCC logo, and then do whatever you want. We are a national organization – not a collection of 380 local programs.”

CAPT James Monahan, USN (Ret.)
Executive Director
US Naval Sea Cadet Corps

Social Media

- “Wardroom” Facebook page is to be restrained to professional conversations – no spats, no bullying
- Facebook “friending” and Twitter “following” of cadets by officers is considered Fraternization
 - [Standards of Conduct ¶17; Region 1-1 INST 02-2013; Region 1-3 Policy Statement 01-12]
 - A new MIDN must delete all current cadets from any personal social networking accounts
 - Relatives are excepted
 - “Fan Pages” are excepted
